

Consent Scenarios

You took a bunch of pictures of two of your friends at a party, some of the pictures are not very flattering. You know a lot of kids are just uploading their pictures to social media and tagging their friends. You also want to upload yours. How should you go about this?

You have been dating your partner for a few months now and are hoping to get physically closer to them. You are not sure if they are ready, but think they might be because everything is going well in your relationship. How should you go about this?

Some kids in school have started this trend of coming up behind their friends and gently kneeling them in the back of the knee as a form of “greeting”. It’s the new “cool” thing to do. You wondered if your friends would be cool with this if you started doing it too. How should you go about this?

Your friend accidentally left their wallet with you and went off somewhere else for a bit. You wanted to buy lunch but realized you were out of cash. You know your friend has cash and is usually good about lending you, but you have always asked first. How should you go about this?

You and your partner are on a date and you had asked if you could hold their hand. They had said yes. Now you are holding hands and you want to move closer to them and you can feel that they’re slightly pulling away, although still holding your hand. How should you go about this?